All New: Fast Forward

Roubini: Climate change causing economic disaster
Nouriel Roubini and Ian Bremmer say extreme weather caused by climate change is hampering the global economy. One big problem: Poor nations have few incentives to address the issue because solutions could slow their economic growth.

Bikes: The new face of bling in China
Ultra high-end models are challenging the bicycle's working-class image in China, and giving posh cars a run for their money as the latest status symbol for the country's nouveau riche.

Food for thought - fish brain activity recorded in real time (0:43)

For the first time, researchers have recorded the progress of a thought as it travels through the brain of a living fish. Using a two step approach, Akira Muto and his team in Japan say it is now possible to identify the brain circuits involved in complex behaviours, a development that could one day be used in psychiatric drug research. Rob Muir has more.
